

Beveridge Revives Old Territorialist Idea for Jews

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

LONDON—A suggestion that that "three or four million Jews" who will remain in continental Europe, outside of Russia, after the war could be settled in "one community somewhere in Europe, Asia or Africa" instead of being returned to their former homes, if "it would be better for their happiness and the peace of the world," was advanced this week by Sir William Beveridge, author of the "Beveridge Plan," for social security, writing in the London "Observer." Such a project, Sir William declared, "could not be regarded as the most difficult problem of the peace."

Allies Responsible

At the same time Sir William urges that the United Nations announce that they accept joint responsibility for a permanent and adequate settlement of the Jewry in Europe and throughout the world after victory. He also proposes that immediate steps be taken to aid the Jews of Europe now by providing for the maintenance in neutral countries until after the war of those Jews who succeed in escaping from Nazi-controlled territory.

Would Warn Nazis

The Nazi satellite states, Sir William writes, must be warned that if they follow the German example in the treatment of the Jews they will be subject to retaliatory measures.

RABBI HERZOG

MESSAGE TO CHIEF RABBI SAYS ALL POSSIBLE BEING DONE FOR JEWS

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

JERUSALEM — The Vatican this week cabled Chief Rabbi Herzog, assuring him that it is doing everything possible for all the victims of Nazi persecution, including the Jews.

The Vatican's message came in response to an appeal addressed to the Pope by Chief Rabbi Herzog, presenting detailed facts on the Nazi massacres of Jews and the extermination of the Jewish population in Nazi-occupied countries through deportations and mass executions.

The Vatican's representative in Jerusalem is kept informed of all reports on Jewish atrocities which reach Jewish organizations in Palestine from Nazi-held territories. It is understood that he transmits this information to Vatican City together with his observations on the reaction of the Jews in Palestine to the fate of the Jews in Nazi Europe.

Mix-Up at Slaughter House Brings OPA Down On Kosher Butchers Here

Shortage May Bring Rationing In Louisville

Special

LOUISVILLE—Possibility of a self-imposed rationing of kosher meat in the city was subject of discussion by the Machziki Hadaas which is planning the convocation of a city-wide meeting in the near future, it was announced this week.

The possibility of rationing kosher meat has been forced to the attention of the Machziki Hadaas by the cut in the supply to the Jewish butchers, who are supposed to be getting 70 per cent of last year's supply, but in actuality are getting somewhere nearer 50 per cent. Under the present arrangement it was explained, families reaching the butcher first were able to buy all they wanted, and even might go from one shop to another, thus forcing other families to get nothing or very little of kosher meat.

The problem has been aggravated it is said, by the influx of newcomers to the city who desire kosher meats.

Year's Illness Fatal To Mrs. Kaminsky

Mrs. Ida Kaminsky, 68, died Tuesday, Feb. 9, in her home, 209 West 33rd St., after a year's illness. Mrs. Kaminsky had lived in Indianapolis 42 years.

Services were held Wednesday in the Aaron-Ruben Funeral Home, with Rabbi Maurice Goldblatt of the Indianapolis Hebrew Congregation and Rabbi Samuel A. Katz of the Shara Tefila Congregation officiating. Burial was in Shara Tefila Cemetery.

Survivors are the husband, Henry Kaminsky; two sons, Jack Kaminsky, Indianapolis attorney, and Morris Kaminsky of Milwaukee, Wis.; a daughter, Miss Sara Kaminsky of Indianapolis;

Kosher Meat Situation Critical; New Ruling Sought

Indianapolis Jewry was faced this week with a prolonged kosher meat famine, as a technical misinterpretation of a ruling of Office of Price Administration stopped kosher slaughtering at the Hoosier Abattoir, 621 W. Ray St., last week end. One local butcher described the outlook here as "very dark." Under the present ruling no kosher meat will be available here until for at least several months.

Confusion over quotas was ascribed as the cause of the situation. The Jewish butchers have been limited to 70 per cent of their 1941 supplies, and although all local butchers are keeping well within that limit, the fact that several of the butchers have moved from slaughter houses which have closed since 1941, is said to be responsible for the mix-up.

At a meeting of the local butchers, together with Rabbi Israel Chodos, Rabbi David Shapiro, Rabbi Samuel Fox, at the home of Rabbi S. A. Katz, Monday night, it was decided to seek a ruling from Washington on the matter, and Rabbi Chodos Thursday was expecting word from the Washington office of the OPA.

Meanwhile butchers announced that an ample quantity of chickens was available at least for the present, and delicatessen meats, such as salami, corned beef, and pepper meat, although not available in unlimited supply, were plentiful for at least several weeks.

A second meeting was held Tuesday night at the home of Rabbi Katz.

"Today, my patrol stepped into a clearing of a tropical jungle, a clearing that yesterday was home to a group of human beings, who lived and laughed before the war touched them. Today we found these people dead . . . their homes blackened embers . . . Why are we American soldiers fighting as soldiers never fought before? . . . BECAUSE WE DO NOT WANT THAT TO HAPPEN TO OUR HOMES."

The editor's chair,

I had a long talk recently with one of the top notch publicity agents of the nation. He employs a large staff in New York, where he used to be an important cog on the city desk of several of the daily papers. He has only one Jewish account, a large national Jewish organization.

We got started by my criticizing his failure to allow to be printed the true situation in connection with some of the work of his client, and he made out a pretty picture why it was best in their case, that such and such not be printed. I think he was all wrong, and results prove my contention, but he still has the ear of that organization's officials, so that the only way real news of what is going on will become known is by the method described below.

I explained that one real good national Jewish publication with no strings attached to it, would knock all his pretty theories into a cocked hat, and surprisingly, he agreed with me wholeheartedly. This is my old theory of a strong national Jewish publication, independent of course, being a most necessary need in American Jewish life today, and this does not exclude many, many other projects which could be classed as vital.

So we got into the situation of the Anglo-Jewish press. He decried the present tendency under which Jewish communities are taking over failing local publications, and since we were both professional newspapermen, it was not necessary for us to go into the very evident reasons against this trend, which is exactly the opposite of my national Jewish publication theory.

The point I made, and which I thought was my trump card, that, apprized of what was going on by this strong national publication, an outraged Jewish public would force recalcitrant national

The Religious Education Issue

IT MAY BE this paper has lost its prophetic insight, but The Post refuses to get excited about the passage of the bill by the Indiana House this week providing for religious instruction for school children. The plan in the bill is the release-time plan which is now being extensively used in many communities, and except that the plan does not seem to be the answer to the problem, The Post refuses to concede that this is an opening wedge against the principle of separation of Church and State.

Whatever the results of the new bill, if it should become law as it has in many other states, the persons responsible are Jewish parents. Those who will fear most the evils that may come from further encroachment on the principle of separation, are exactly those who are most guilty, for inevitably it has been the so-called emancipated Jewish group which has thrown into the ash can both their own religious observance and necessarily, if they are consistent, religious instruction for their children.

It took no great deal of acumen for The Jewish Post to say as far back as May 21, 1937:

"In this paper's opinion, public schools will soon, very soon, institute some plan for religious education."

The same editorial said:

"... three out of four Jewish children grow up in total ignorance not only of their religion but also their history and heritage. Jewish educators realize that after-school education in Talmud Torahs has been a failure because it absorbs time for instruction which should be time for play. Sunday school education is as inadequate as a pop fly with the bases full and two men out."

Opening Office by Lodge Excellent Move

OPENING OF A permanent full-time office with a paid secretary in charge marks one of the best moves of the Indianapolis lodge of B'nai B'rith in years as far as the inner-workings of the organization is concerned. Fought for years by the old-timers, the move was finally put over by Milton Fineberg, acting president, who in his years as secretary found the work too arduous for even the most diligent part-time official.

The new move should also provide a precedent for other organizations whose membership totals in the hundreds. No volunteer worker, no matter how faithful, can be expected to handle the details of any group, such as making out statements, taking care of books, and so forth. The Indianapolis Zionist District, whose paid membership will soon total 500, is a case in point. Thus far the work has been done for the most part by members, and some dues turned in three and four months ago are just now being acknowledged by membership cards. Unfortunately the Zionist District is permitted to keep only $1.00 out of the $5.00 annual dues, so that the problem is aggravated by lack of funds.

However the work is done, and whether as now by the B'nai B'rith, or by volunteer workers, it still costs money, only in the latter case the money is a contribution of time by the volunteer. In the new example of B'nai B'rith will be found the real answer, for not only will the organization's officials be given time to consider the more important and necessary work of the order, but the detail work will now be handled expeditiously.

Current Comment

Rabbis Resigning from American Council for Judaism, Rabbi Abraham Feldman Says in The Jewish Ledger of Hartford, Conn.—We are glad to report to our readers that the ranks of the "Ninety Protest Rabbiner" are beginning to crack. We know of several men who originally joined this so-called "American Council for Judaism" who have withdrawn their support from it on the ground that while they are not Zionists and wanted to record their differences and welcome an opportunity for discussion of the matter with those who were like-minded, they were unwilling to become instruments of disruption in Jewish life, of damage to Jewish causes, or to have upon their souls the terrible responsibility that the continued flamboyant statements by the most vociferous proponents of that group is likely to cost hundreds of thousands of Jewish lives.

It would be amusing, were it not so tragic, to note the tenor of the speeches being made by one or another of the opponents. For years anti-Zionists have done their utmost to exclude from community leadership those who were Zionistic. Some of these people have, even within the ranks of the Central Conference of American rabbis, excluded from leadership, whenever they had the possibility, those members of the Conference who were Zionists. They are unwilling to be reminded of that now when Jewish life is strongly pro-Zionistic and they discover that they themselves are on the short end of the argument.

We can't forgive them, amongst the several unforgivable acts they are guilty of, for sending out their statements to the Christian clergy of the United States. Why did they do it? Was it not a deliberate act of sabotage of that which is being done in Palestine by Jews?

They profess their love for Palestine, but if Jewish life had depended upon the evidence of that love which they produced there would be no Palestinian community today that could receive those who have gone there in the past quarter century and those who are clamoring to come to Palestine today and in the days that are to come.

Recently one of "The Ninety" protested against Zionism because "it claims, without proof, that it speaks for the Jews of America." Maybe it does. Maybe it does not. Certainly there are more Jews in America who are pro-Zionist than there are anti-Zionists. But it comes with ill grace, this argument from those who have presumed to speak for the Jews of America even though they who attempted to speak were pathetically outnumbered.

It would be a laughable argument were it not so tragic and inexcusable that, as the same speaker recently pointed out, Zionism "tends to separate Jews from other Americans and tends to delay our integration into the American way of life." The speaker ought to know that is not true. Or does he mean to suggest that men like Wise and Silver and Heller and Bricker and Julian W. Mack and Felix Frankfurter and the thousands of others in every community who are Zionists are not integrated "into the American way of life?" The speaker who made this shameful statement ought to be ashamed of himself! He ought to know better, and if he does not, he ought to have the modesty and the humility not to say what is so palpably, so manifestly an untruth. And again the same speaker cast aspersions and doubt upon the loyalty to the cause of the United Nations of those who are sympathetic, to put it mildly, to the cause of a Jewish Palestine. His heart bleeds for the Arabs more than it feels for his own people, and in saying this we do not ignore the existence of an Arab problem. But we have a right to expect of a Jew and a Rabbi that he would think also of the claims of his own people, of the needs of his own people, of the tragedy of his own people, and certainly would not, in this critical hour, dare to challenge the devotion of his fellow American Jews to the WARSAW—Nahum Sokolow, of the Zionist executive, reaching here from Danzig, stated that the next Zionist Congress would undoubtedly be held there. Mr. Sokolow conferred with Premier Sikorski on the question of the projected expulsion of many Jewish refugees.

JERUSALEM—A large gathering of Palestine notables — with the exception of Arab leaders—attended the lecture on relativity delivered by Prof. Albert Einstein at the Hebrew University. The professor spoke in Hebrew and French. He was welcomed by M. M. Ussishkin and High Commissioner Sir Herbert Samuel.

CRACOW—As result of threats by anti-Semitic students that Jews will be barred from classes at the university medical schools unless arrangements are made for the delivery of Jewish corpses for dissection by the Jewish students, the Jewish authorities have arranged to supply one Jewish corpse out of every ten.

LONDON—Vladimir Jabotinsky's letter of registration, from the Zionist executive organization, which was made public here, denounces the present tactics of the Actions Committee and the "political weakness" of the Zionist executive which, he charges, are leading the Zionist movement to its downfall.

Jewish organizations to obey the wishes of the people they profess to represent and serve, was immediately discounted by this press agent. I knew then exactly where I stood. This fellow had no idea of service to the community, but his one idea was to do the best for his client. He said that taking the issue to the public would accomplish nothing, indicating to me his lack of faith in democratic processes. I am continually butting my head up against a stone wall in fighting against entrenched leadership in local and national Jewish organizations, and I refuse to be consoled by the fact that slowly we are getting democratic principles introduced into the running of Jewish organizations. If the American Jewish public doesn't get its say now, when democracy is preached even by Jewish reactionaries, it is quite possible that the public will be told to "eat cake" when the pressure is removed from these "status quo" groups and individuals.

Strauss To Be Buried Here

The body will be returned to Indianapolis for burial. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Lucy Nathan Strauss, a niece, Miss Ruth Strauss of Indianapolis, and two brothers.

TOWN CRIER

By G. M. C.

I had a vision the other night and I saw Mrs. W. C. Lowdermilk, wife of the agricultural department official addressing the Hadassah donor luncheon.

A group of us had dinner the other night with Ludwig Lewisohn, the novelist, and the Zionist gamecock put away a large size steak. He confided that he had two novels finished, both of which were ready for the publishers, but one of which, because it was a war novel, should get on the book stands as quickly as possible. He predicted a rough course for the new novel, because it was controversial. It centered about the Struma incident, and spared no criticism of British officialdom responsible for the horrible death of the 700 refugees. Anyway the novel should cause quite a ripple in Jewish circles at least. Lewisohn's last novel, "The Renegade" was reviewed by every Rabbi in the United States at least once, and in many cases, provided sermon subjects and fodder for articles for months and months.

We send several hundred papers free to soldiers throughout the United States (we no longer can send them overseas unless they are paid subscriptions under a new post office ruling). This is our own little way of doing our share, but every once in a while someone wants to take this little pleasure away from us. I think I told you about the fellow that offered to contribute some money to offset this expense to us, but naturally I turned him down. Now I have a $20 check for the same purpose and after insistence I've decided to use it, but not keep it. To the organization or individual who sends in the best letter or about whom the best letter comes in telling of some recent activity in connection with the war effort, The Post will award an $18.75 war bond. Or rather this anonymous donor will award the $18.75 war bond. This contest is open to any Jewish person in Indiana whether a subscriber or not, and I will be the judge.

Just in case you run out of words sometime to describe your feelings for your wife, I am reprinting a paragraph from the farewell sermon of Rabbi Charles Shulman (brother of Rabbi Albert Shulman of South Bend) of Glencoe, Ill., who is leaving to enter the armed forces as a chaplain. Mrs. Shulman has spoken in practically every community in Indiana, and is almost as well known in the state as her husband.

"It is easier to leave when I contemplate my fortune in the helpmate who has so deeply enriched my own life and the life of the congregation. You know that I have seldom yielded to the temptation to speak about Avis Shulman from a public platform except in passing praise for deeds well done. Today I feel no such restraint as has guided me previously. If ever a man was blessed by kind Providence with great companionship and love, I have been so blessed. You are quite aware of many of her talents and capacities, her charm and her vibrant personality. She has not only given herself freely and unsparingly to the needs of her congregation, she has also brought pride and distinction to the whole Jewish community of Chicago by her representation of the best in Jewish life. The home over which she has presided has been a model of culture and grace. The services which she has written and conducted have been inspiring to child and adult alike. So long as she remains here to lend strength to you, I shall not lack confidence in the normal continuity of things."

Down in Louisville, the goal of the annual welfare fund (known as the United Jewish Campaign) is never announced in public print. That is the wish of the Louisville Conference of Jewish Organizations (the counterpart of our Federation, except that the local Jewish groups elect their own representatives to it) and for the most part it is observed. But I don't expect that the city fathers will object if I announce to the Indianapolis Jewish community that one of its old members, Jack Goldfarb, who this year was co-chairman of the drive, led the list with $5,000.

Last week we carried an article about the dedication of a Torah at Camp Atterbury, and in the article we mentioned that it was a donation of Mrs. Jacob Flox of Peru. That was not entirely accurate, as we knew at the time the article was published, but respecting the modesty of Mrs. Isaac Wolf, we let it go through that way. The article we got locally gave Mrs. Flox as the donator, and the article that came from Chaplain Jacob M. Ott at Atterbury, ascribed the gift to Mrs. Wolf. Noting the discrepancy we called Mrs. Wolf, who admitted that she had given the Torah, and that Mrs. Flox had provided the mantelpiece and adornments for the Torah but suggested we let the write-up stand as was. I thought for a while that I would make the change, and then considered that I would let Mrs. Wolf have her modesty, although I do this that this recognition here is only proper and deserved.

LAFAYETTE — Services Friday night will start at 8 p. m., under Rabbi A. B. Freedman. His sermon will be "The Jew's Conception of National Life." Oneg Shabbat will follow.

cause of democracy, to the cause of decency, to the cause of religion, to the cause of the four freedoms to which all of us alike are committed and for which we in common with our associates in the United Nations are making sacrifices willingly and eagerly.

For shame! The opposition to Zionism must be weak, indeed, if it has to resort to tactics followed in the past by those from whom we have suffered so much in different periods of our history. We have a word for it. It is "mesirah." And those who peddle it are "Mos'rim." Must one become a "moser" to be an anti-Zionist? It seems that some of "The Ninety" have come to this position. There may be "objective arguments" against Zionism. We do not know them. But there may be such arguments. Let those be used if there be those who feel the urge to use them. But let them be "objective." They must not argue on the level of "mesirah."

DESCRIBES WORK OF NATIONAL HOME FOR JEWISH CHILDREN

To the editor:

The Jewish National Home at Denver, Colo. has taken care of hundreds of children in the 36 years of its existence. The Home not only cares for the bodies of destitute children of tuberculous patients, homeless refugees and other needy ones obtained through cooperation with doctors, hospital clinics, agencies and individuals throughout the country, children who cannot find care in their own communities, but has taught these children the traditions of Judaism, loyalty to their faith and to this country. This newly formed chapter asks the wholehearted support of the Jewish women of Indianapolis in its drive for membership. Dues are only $1.00 per year.

Signed,

HELEN CONGRESS,
President.

While tyrant hordes keep marching on.

Wake, wake Oh, Israel, thy mission's waiting,
In hate once more, is writ thy name.

Come, raise again that shield of honor—
Thy rampart that withstands flood and flame.

No idle gesture was thy preservation
Throughout the ages, upon this earth.

The ideals and ethics from among thee first born
Again from among thee, must find a new birth.

Wake, wake Oh Israel, a new morn's dawning
Upon the horizon, and with it a new day

From out of this darkest of nights shall be born
To banish forever thy despair and dismay.

Nay, sing no longer the song of slumber,
For thy banner of Glory once so proudly flown

Though crushed, lies yet waiting in the ruins of ages
For a triumphant Israel, to come to his own.
